'Guiarat will spurn hate mongers, BJP to shatter all past records'

rejected hate mongers

NANA PONDHA

(WALSAD): In a high-voltage start to the campaigning for a triangular electoral contest in Gujarat, Prime Minister Narendra Modi on Saturday strongly invoked Gujarat's pride and coined a new slogan Aa Gujarat Mein Banayu che' (We have made this Gujarat) to credit people's perseverance, resilience and dedication in shaping a flourishing state. Addressing the first election rally after announcement of dates from Nana Pondha, a small hamlet in tribal-dominated Valsad district, Modi said people have not just resolved to bring back BJP to power but also shatter all previous records (of seates). "I want to see my own record broken Bluenotirals."

"I want to see my own record broken. Bhupendra's record should be better than Narendra's," he said to a loud applause. Modi refrained from

Modi refrained from naming the opposition but exuded confidence that people will spurn all those who are unleashing a barrage of falsehood to defame the state.

Modi said every person of Gujarat now has a strong feeling of ownership in transforming the state.

"Looking at the remarkable progress over the last 20 years, the inner voice in every Gujarati proudly proclaims 'Aa Gujarat Mein Banavyu che'," he said, urging people to months together. But we the people of Gujarat picked up these challenges and decisively won over them," PM Modi said However, she made up for it by winning a gold medal with a deadlift of 60 kg and breaking the world record in squat by lifting 50 kg," her mother Dharini told Tol from the US.

Kanak could hardly hide her excitement at winning the gold medal. Sneaking to 10.

Kanak could hardly hide her excitement at winning the gold medal. Speaking to ToI, she said, "I'm very happy that I lifted 60kg in the deadlift. I had practised lifting 55 kg only but managed to lift 60 kg easily. When I tried to lift 70 kg, it was tough and I failed in my effort. I also broke the world record by lifting 50 kg in the squat." Asked Asked how she managed to lift weights so easily, she r e p l i e d nonchalantly, Think I've this in blood and so I'm able to lift weights easily. When I could not do the bench press because the entry was set at 25 kg, I cried a lot. I'm targeting a medal in March in the Egypt event, where I've got an entry based on this performance.

Unhappy with her own performance, Oharini to focus more on daughter's Competing in the women's 82.5kg category, Oharini lifted 370 kg to win a gold medal. She did a squat of 170 kg, a bench press of 70 kg and 130 kg deadlift to clinch the yellow metal, a performance as my total lifting has reduced a lot since the 2018 competition. I could not practice consistently because of the festival and the closing of the gym just before the competition. I'll focus more on Kanak and my husband's participation in future events." Indersingh too competed in the men's 82.5 kg category, He lifted 620kg for the silver medal, missing the gold by a whisker of 2.5 kg. Indersingh conpeted a squat of 230kg, bench press of 140kg and a deadlift of 550 kg. Other Indians in the fray too returned with medals. Mehul Dabhani nocketed gold medals in 90kg and 110kg categories respectively while Nafish Khan Pathan returned with a bronze in the 82.5 kg category. Siddharth Trivedi and Kailash Sikabju bagged bronze medals in classic row, in which powerlifting is done without equipment.

Ahmedabad couple and daughter | Gujarat assembly elections: Congress issues 'chargesheet' against state BJP govt

Ahmedabad : Ahead of the upcoming assembly lection in the state, the Gujarat Pradesh Congress Committee issued a 'chargesheet' against the BIP government, accusing it of mismanaging the economy, creating an unemployment crisis, ignoring healthcare, cheating farmers, promoting corny capitalism, and making corruption a way of life. All that an average Gujarati got was "hunger, fear and tyranny," the chargesheet claimed. It accused the state government of mismanaging the Covid-19 response, not delivering on its promises for housing and electricity, and overlooking the welfare of the Adivasi communities.

The 22-point chargesheet claimed that there is a feeling of lack of security among the Dalits and women are less safe. The Congress alleged in the chargesheet that law and order is in a shambles and theBJP has been resorting to communal politics for electoral gains. "At a time when the BJP is working to divert the main issues, this chargesheet has been released to draw the attention of the public from the table of the public from the table of the public from the table of the public from the sabeen released to draw the attention back to these issues," former Union minister and Congress leader Bharatsinh Solanki said at and Congress leader Bharatsinh Solanki said at apress conference on Sunday. The document also hit out at the BJP for not implementing the MGNREGA (Mahatma Gandhi National Rural Employment Guarantee Act), and said the lapse has led to the exploitation of workers. It said labour laws have been diluted to suit factory owners. The chargesheet also faulted the BJP for mistreating overnment employees and gradually demolishing the Panchayati Raj system in the state. It sited the data of state.

It cited the data of various government and non-government agencies, along government agencies, along with media reports to support the allegations. The opposition party appealed to the public to vote it to power to make "Gujarat of Mahatma Gandhi and Sardar Patel proud again". The opposition party also highlighted the Morbi bridge collance tragedy, which nightighted the Morbi bridge collapse tragedy which claimed 135 lives. It dubbed as 'unconstitutional" the release of 11 convicts in the Bilkis Bano gang-rape case.

Morbi collapse: No safety clause in contract on bridge maintenance

MORBI: The 15-year contract the Oreva Group signed with Morbi municipality contract the Oreva Group signed with Morbi municipality for the upkeep of the suspension bridge didn't have a word about its safety. More revelations are surfacing in the widely debated absence of a fitness certificate for the bridge whose collapse killed 135 on October 30. It has now emerged that the contract for maintenance, operation and security of the bridge neither had a clause mandating that the company obtain a fitness certificate nor a provision that the municipality should seek one. In fact, defence lawyer

On Dridge M DP Shukla submitted on saturday that even the Morbi municipality had never taken a fitness certificate when it managed the bridge from 1949 to 2007. Oreva Group took over the bridge's maintenance in 2007. The details were part of submissions made by the defence in the court of the chief judicial magistrate, which upheld them and rejected on Saturday the prosecution's plea for further remand of two Oreva managers, Deepak Parekh and Dinesh Dave. The two men, along with seven others, were arrested and booked for culpable homicide not amounting to murder. The debate over a fitness certificate began after the now suspended chief officer of Morbi municipality Sandeepsinh Jhala had said the company hadn't obtained this document. The prosecution sought five days' police custody of the managers on grounds that investigators need to find documents, including documents, including contracts and minutes of the meeting, from the municipality and the Rajkot district collectorate pre-2007.

Rs 5,000 loan | 'Polymers tackle can multidrug-resistant bacteria'

AHMEDABAD: The medical word, nationally and globally, has been increasingly red-flagging growing antibiotic resistance which leaves them with fewer options to tackle the menace of multidrug resistant bacteria. Adoctoral cresearcher at IIT Gandhinagar (IIT-Gn) has claimed to have developed antibiotic polymers which offer a cheaper alternative to antimicrobial peptides used to curb the growth of bacteria.

Anju Tyagil, a scholar in chemistry discipline, was awarded her PhD earlier this year for her thesis "Membra ne-targeting methacrylamide-based antibiotic polymers to combat drug-resistant bacteria: synthesis, characterization, and investidation of biological

"These polymers which mimic the host antimicrobial peptides (AMP) for treatment are a potential are a potential pharmaceutical candidate for the development pharmaceutical candidate for the development of inexpensive biocompatible membrane - active antimicrobial polymeric materials due to their easy synthesis and high antibacterial efficacy," Tyagi bold Evalaging the remise antibacterial efficacy," Iyagi told. Explaining the premise, she said that excessive use of antibiotics in both humans and animals has raised microbial resistance over the decades. The resistance occurs when antibiotics lose occurs when antibiotics lose their ability to kill or prevent growth of microorganisms like bacteria and fungi. "Difficult to treat infections are a reality for many, as multi-drug resistant pathogens have emerged where conventional antibiotics are not working at antibiotics are not working at all," she said. Tyagi said that while AMPs are a potential option under investigation, there are challenges such as chemical and medication instability and high manufacturing cost that prohibit its wider application. The polymers developed during the research mimics the mechanism that prohibits the growth of bacteria. For the study, she took two of the most prevalent bacteria - E. Coli and S. Aureus - in humans that cause an array of health issues. The bacteria was exposed to the polymers for a period of 30 days. The results are encouraging with the minimum inhibitory concentration (MIC) found to be within satisfactory range. be within satisfactory range.

It opens up a new avenue to fight multidrug resistant bacteria with membrane targeting polymers." City-based experts said that antimicrobial resistance is already a major issue. Dr Parth Desai, COO of KD Hospital, said that the phenomenon is not only causing mortality across the globe, but is becoming a major issue primarily due to practices such as over-the-counter medication and stopping the medicines when the patients feel better. "A coordinated response is required to ensure that we can reduce the drug-resistant infertince." he said Experts required to ensure that we can reduce the drug-resistant infections," he said. Experts also cited Indian Council for Medical Research (ICMR) of 2021 where sustained increase in drug-resistant pathogens was found which was difficult to treat with available medicines.
