'Aligning with BJP good... Punjab can't run without a national party'

THE STAKES couldn't be greater for AMARINDER SINGH, who walked out of the Congress fighting to stay on as Chief Minister, and must shoulder in the coming polls both his fledgling outfit and his new-found alliance with the BJP. The 79-year-old who shrugged off accusations of being inaccessible all through his term as CM is now on the road every day, meeting people and addressing concerns, till well past midnight. He speaks to MANRA GREWALSHARMA at his sprawling Moti Bagh Palace in Patiala on a lunch break amidst one such hectic schedule:

What are the prospects of the alliance between the BIP and your party?

I am getting a very good response, last night I thought people would break the stage (such was the rush). There is a latent swing towards the BJP in Punjab thanks to welfare schemes such as Ujjwala, distribution of free ration, and other subsidies due to which the poor get Rs 2,000 a month. People often tell my daughter, who is going door-todoor, that 'Vote Modi ko hi daalenge (We will vote only for Modi)'. I also did a lot for the poor during my tenure with the lal dora and basera projects for housing. Besides, I gave health insurance of Rs 5 lakh which allows every Punjabi the liberty of treatment at any private hospital.

Why did you choose the BJP?

Aligning with the BIP is good for Punjab. We can't function without a national party. Without Central funds, we won't even have the money to pay salaries. The BIP is being very good to me. I have had no trouble with them and the minister in-charge Punjab, Gajendra Shekhawat, is open to everything. Also, remember, when I elected was Congress MP in 1980, my mother was the Raiva Sabha MP from the
